FREE FAMILY GUIDE | AGES 7-12

What else could be true?

A small question. A different way to look at everyday moments.

Help your child notice a thought, explore another possibility and choose a helpful next step.

Big feelings. Curious minds.

The Reframers approach gives families a playful way to explore perspective. The handmade glasses are a reminder to pause and look again.

Recognise.

Notice the thought.

Reframe.

Look another way.

Repeat.

Keep practising.

THE IDEA BEHIND THE GLASSES

Same moment. Different possibilities.

Our first thought is one interpretation. Sometimes there is more to find out.

THE MOMENT

A friend walks past without saying hello.

FIRST THOUGHT

"They are ignoring me. They do not like me."

LOOK AGAIN

"What else could be true?"

POSSIBILITIES

"Maybe they did not see me. I could say hello."

The feeling still matters.

"That felt upsetting. I can see why you wondered what happened." Start here. Explore another possibility when your child is ready.

What we are practising

Recognise: "What thought popped into your mind?"

Reframe: "What do we know? What else might explain it?"

Repeat: "What could we try next time?"

WORDS TO BORROW

Three everyday moments

Try one question. Listen to the answer. Leave room for your child's own ideas.

"I am terrible at this."

A task feels difficult.

You could say: "This part feels hard. Which bit can we work on together?"

A possible new thought: "I am finding this part difficult. I can ask for help."

"They do not want me."

You could say: "That hurts. What happened, and what are we still guessing?"

A possible new thought: "I do not know why yet. I can ask, or get help if it keeps happening."

"I ruined the whole thing."

One mistake takes over the story.

You could say: "What happened? What else happened too?"

A possible new thought: "One part went wrong. I can decide what to change or try next."

These are possibilities to explore together. Your child does not have to use the suggested words.

A FIVE-MINUTE FAMILY PRACTICE

Connect. Get curious. Choose a step.

Pick a small, ordinary moment when your child is ready to talk.

1

Connect first.

"How did that feel? Would you like a moment, or shall we talk?"

2

Notice the first thought.

"What did your mind say about what happened?"

3

Look for another possibility.

"What do we know? What are we guessing? What else could be true?"

4

Choose something helpful.

"Would you like to ask, try again, take a break or get some help?"

When the problem is real

If your child describes repeated exclusion, unkindness or something unsafe, help address what is happening and involve a trusted adult. A different perspective can sit alongside practical support.

Bring the question into everyday life.

Children make their own glasses and explore different perspectives through stories, games and practice. Discover Reframers workshops and register your interest.
